

OKAY NANI KESA WALA

Module 1: Gender and Sexuality as a Social Reality

- Distinction between sex (biological) and gender (social roles, cultural expectations).
- Gender and sexuality influence identity, style, and personal choices.
- Gender socialization starts in childhood (toys, school, family).
- Stereotypes and prejudices reinforce inequality.
- SOGIE (Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity, Expression) broadens the view of human diversity.
- Gender perceptions change across time—increasing recognition of LGBTQIA+ rights and women's voices.

Module 2: Biomedical Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- Anatomy and physiology of reproductive systems.
- Hormones (estrogen, progesterone, testosterone, LH, FSH) regulate reproduction.
- Menstrual cycle and reproductive processes.
- Sexual health and hygiene practices.
- Risky behaviors during adolescence and their consequences.

Module 3: Psychosocial Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- Gender-fair language: avoiding sexist, trivializing, or invisibilizing expressions.
- Stereotypes: explicit vs. implicit beliefs about groups.
- Prejudice and discrimination: negative attitudes that lead to exclusion or violence.
- Media representations: women and LGBTQ+ often objectified or stereotyped.
- Empowerment through reclaiming media and equal access to storytelling platforms .

Module 4: Political-Legal Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- International frameworks: Beijing Platform for Action (1995) on violence against women.
- Philippine laws:
 1. R.A. 9262: Anti-Violence Against Women and Children Act.
 2. Anti-Sexual Harassment Law.
 3. Anti-Rape Law.
- Violence includes physical, sexual, psychological, and economic abuse.
- Protection orders (BPO, TPO, PPO) safeguard victims.
- Legal cases highlight how psychological and economic abuse are recognized forms of violence.

Module 5: Cross-Cutting Issues in Gender and Sexuality

- Masculinity & men's roles: engaging men without sidelining women.
- Promoting dialogue between men and women for equality.
- Education as a tool to reshape gender roles.
- Toxic masculinity: suppressing emotions, dominance, rigid gender roles .
- "The Way Forward":
 1. Make masculinities visible.
 2. Engage men as agents of change.
 3. Create empathy-building opportunities.
 4. Document positive male roles.
 5. Promote role models & community mentors.
 6. Identify key entry points.
 7. Develop integrated approaches.
 8. Implement targeted services for justice and equity.

✦ Part 2: Frequently Occurring Keywords & Key Phrases

Gender

Sexuality

Sexual orientation / SOGIE

Gender roles / stereotypes

Masculinity / toxic masculinity

Equality / equity / justice

Violence against women (VAW) / R.A. 9262

Discrimination / prejudice / stereotypes

Empowerment

Human rights

These keywords represent the core themes: gender as a social construct, health and biology, legal protections, language/media representations, and the involvement of both men and women in achieving equality.

✦ Part 3: Key Sentences that Summarize Each Section

Module 1: “Sex, Gender and Sexuality affects our life choices. These influences our identity, taste and style as a person.”

Module 2: “Understanding female reproductive anatomy is not only the study of its external and internal structures; it also includes the hormonal cycle.”

Module 3: “Language is a powerful force that plays a significant role in how one perceives the world.”

Module 4: “The Supreme Court ruled that physical violence is only the most visible form of abuse. Psychological abuse, particularly forced social and economic isolation of women, is also common.”

Module 5: “Gender equality will not mean homogenous uniformity. We will still be able to celebrate our gender differences.”

TAAS NGA YAPPING TYPE

Module 1: Gender and Sexuality as a Social Reality

- Sex vs. Gender:
Sex is a biological term that refers to physical and physiological traits such as reproductive organs. Gender, on the other hand, is a social construct that involves roles, behaviors, and cultural expectations. Together, they influence how society perceives men, women, and those outside the binary.
- Influence on Identity:
Sex, gender, and sexuality affect the way people express themselves and make choices. These shape our identity, tastes, and personal style as individuals. From childhood to adulthood, these factors influence how we see ourselves and how others see us.
- Gender Socialization:
Gender role socialization begins as soon as we are born and continues through family, school, religion, and media. It teaches what is considered acceptable behavior for boys and girls. Over time, it shapes our understanding of gender roles and our place in society.
- Stereotypes and Prejudices:
Gender stereotypes are formed when institutions reinforce biased ideas about what men and women should do. These can include assumptions about strength, nurturing, or leadership abilities. Such stereotypes limit opportunities and contribute to discrimination.
- SOGIE:
Sexual orientation refers to whom someone is attracted to emotionally and physically, while gender identity is how a person sees themselves in terms of gender. Gender expression is how people present themselves through actions, clothing, or mannerisms. These three dimensions explain the diversity of human experiences.
- Changing Perceptions:
Views on gender and sexuality have shifted over time. Today, there is greater recognition of women's rights and LGBTQIA+ identities. This shift highlights that gender roles are not fixed but evolve with social change.

Module 2: Biomedical Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- Anatomy and Physiology:
The reproductive system is designed to produce offspring, with male and female organs working together for reproduction. Each part has a role, from producing gametes to supporting pregnancy and childbirth. A strong knowledge of anatomy is key to understanding human development.

- Hormonal Regulation:

Hormones like estrogen, progesterone, and testosterone regulate changes in the body. They control puberty, sexual development, and reproductive cycles. LH and FSH are especially important in processes like ovulation and sperm production.

- Menstrual Cycle:

The menstrual cycle is a repeating process controlled by the brain, hormones, and reproductive organs. It includes ovarian changes (follicular, ovulation, luteal phases) and uterine changes (menstrual, proliferative, secretory phases). This cycle prepares the body for pregnancy or resets if fertilization does not occur.

- Sexual Health and Hygiene:

Sexual health is not just about avoiding disease, but about well-being and respectful relationships. It includes the right to safe and pleasurable experiences free from coercion and violence. Hygiene practices during puberty are vital to maintaining health and self-esteem.

- Adolescent Risks:

Teenage pregnancy brings serious health risks such as anemia, low birth weight, and depression. It also causes social and economic challenges, often leading to school dropouts and poverty cycles. Preventive measures like education and contraception are crucial.

Module 3: Psychosocial Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- Gender-Fair Language:

Language shapes how people see the world. Using gender-fair language avoids sexist terms that marginalize women or other genders. It promotes equality by ensuring both sexes are represented fairly.

- Stereotypes:

Stereotypes are oversimplified beliefs about groups of people. They can be explicit, like openly stating that women are weak, or implicit, existing unconsciously. These stereotypes reinforce inequality and limit people's potential.

- Prejudice and Discrimination:

Prejudice is a negative attitude toward someone based on gender, while discrimination is the action that follows it. This may lead to harassment, exclusion, or violence. Both prevent people from accessing equal opportunities.

- Media Representations:

Media often portrays women as objects and reinforces heteronormativity.

LGBTQ+ characters are frequently stereotyped or erased entirely. These portrayals shape public perceptions and can justify discrimination.

- Empowerment through Media:

Despite its problems, media can also empower marginalized groups. It provides platforms to challenge stereotypes and promote diverse voices. Representation in media helps normalize equality.

Module 4: Political-Legal Perspective in Gender and Sexuality

- Beijing Platform:

The Beijing Platform for Action (1995) declared violence against women as a major global issue. It set guidelines for governments to address gender inequality. This framework continues to influence international policies.

- Anti-VAWC (R.A. 9262):

This Philippine law protects women and children from violence. It includes physical, sexual, psychological, and economic abuse. It provides legal remedies to safeguard victims.

- Anti-Sexual Harassment Law:

This law prohibits unwelcome sexual advances in workplaces, schools, and training institutions. It recognizes harassment as a violation of human rights. The law holds perpetrators accountable regardless of position.

- Anti-Rape Law:

Rape is defined as sexual assault committed through force, threat, intimidation, or when the victim is unconscious. The law expands protection by recognizing different forms of coercion. It aims to protect the dignity and bodily integrity of victims.

- Protection Orders:

Victims of abuse can obtain protection orders to stop further harm. These include Barangay Protection Orders (BPO), Temporary Protection Orders (TPO), and Permanent Protection Orders (PPO). Each type offers varying levels of protection.

- Court Rulings:

The Supreme Court has ruled that abuse is not only physical. Psychological and economic abuse are equally damaging. This recognizes the many forms violence can take.

Module 5: Cross-Cutting Issues in Gender and Sexuality

- Masculinity and Men's Roles:

Men also play a role in achieving gender equality. They can challenge harmful norms and support women's empowerment. Engaging men ensures a balanced approach to equality.

- Dialogue for Equality:

True equality does not erase differences but values diversity. Both men and women must be included in conversations. Dialogue builds understanding and cooperation.

- Education as a Tool:

Education reshapes ideas about gender roles. It challenges stereotypes and provides new perspectives. Schools can promote respect and fairness among students.

- Toxic Masculinity:

Toxic masculinity refers to harmful cultural norms that pressure men to suppress emotions and dominate others. It discourages vulnerability and equality. Overcoming it requires redefining what it means to be masculine.

- Way Forward (Strategies):

Making masculinities visible and engaging men as partners in equality is key. Communities should highlight positive male role models and build empathy across genders. Integrated approaches in education, health, and justice ensure long-term change.